

GPC's Next Project: "The Old Barn"

UPDATE

A New 'Gateway' for the Point

Restoring Innis Arden Cottage was a big step forward for Greenwich Point, but when the Conservancy's second project, the Old Barn, is complete, it will be transformative. The Cottage, the Old Barn and the newly designed and landscaped areas will effectively form a magnificent gateway to historic Greenwich Point.

In June 2012, the Representative Town Meeting voted to accept our gift of up to $850,000 to complete the new Gateway project. The project will include restoring the stone and shingle Barn, removing the center section added in later years, and adding a dining terrace with knockout Sound views. The red brick restroom building will be demolished.

Once work on the Old Barn is finished, parked cars and asphalt (in the area between the restored buildings) will be replaced with beach grasses, benches and a winding stone path. Proceeds from the Conservancy's annual Beach Ball will kick off the Gateway project.
